IMPROVED POSITION OF NATION IS SEEN

END OF 1942 IS SET AS COMPLETION DATE

Washington, Jan. 18.—(T.)—President Roosevelt's defense production chief told congress today that it would be late 1941 before this country could supply "any great amount" of aid to Britain under the lend-lease bill "unless we take products out of existing facilities."

This official, William S. Knudsen, director general of production management, recommended passage of the legislation to lend and lease munitions of war to Britain for her fight with the Axis powers, on the ground that "this is part of our own defense."

Representative Chipfield (R-Ill.) asked this question: If arrangements were arranged to give England credit, such as repelling certain provisions of the Neutrality and Johnson Acts, wouldn't the same objective of British aid be accomplished as is sought in the bill?

GLASS BELIEVES WAR ADVISABLE

Washington, Jan. 18.—(T.)—Senator Glass (D-Va.) said today it is his personal view that the United States should declare war on Germany now, but he added the question as to when should be determined primarily by policy experts in the State, War and Navy Departments.

FIRST RUN PROGRAM AT COLUMBIA THEATRE TODAY AND SUNDAY

"Remedy For Riches"
An interesting theme whereby Jean Hersholt's famous "Dr. Christian" character saves his town from being the victim of a financial promotion is the basis of the new Stephens-Lang Production, "Remedy For Riches."

In this new story, starring Hersholt, the entire town of River's End, is about to become seriously involved in a fake oil deal when the good doctor uncovers a plot that would have cost his friends dearly. But all this doesn't complete the theme of the screenplay, which is peppered with clever comedy situations. Hoping to relieve audiences of present day tensions, the producers of "Remedy For Riches" have interwoven situations into the plot that provide a continuous flow of hilarity.

Aiding Hersholt in the enactment of the story are such popular performers as Dorothy Lovett, Edgar Kennedy, Walter Catlett, Jed Prouty, Maude Eburne, and Robert Baldwin.

"Doomed Caravan"
With William Boyd again cast as Cassidy, "Doomed Caravan" is a stirring and thrilling story of old wagon freighting days on the plains. It tells of a courageous woman, played by Minna Gombell, owner of a thriving freighting line, who is determined to stay in business despite the depredations of a gang of bandits hired by a rival outfit to drive her out.

It becomes Cassidy's job to break up the band and to restore order in the region, man-sized job enough since the United States Army was unable to do it. Riding at "Hoppy's" side, as in the previous Cassidy thrillers, is "Lucky" Jenkins, played by Russell Hayden, and "California," portrayed by the veteran screen comic Andy Clyde. Others in the cast are Gloria Hawkins, Morris Ankrum, and over thirty seasoned riders.

Magic Spring

YESTERDAY: David, working with his fiancée, Polly, and his young cousin Peter, just put the swimming pool at "Freddy's Folly" back in shape. But Margo Powers, who is glamour personified and the daughter of David's employer, stopped by in time to throw a shadow over the first swimming party. Margo has decided she is in love with David.

Chapter 15

Margo's Competition

"We won't be long!" David called back.

Margo nodded. But she did not move. She continued to sit cross-legged beside the pool. She gazed down into its depths, watching the little cotton puff clouds that were in the sky duplicate themselves in the clear water. She was suddenly depressed for some reason or other. Just why, she could not say.

But David's devotion to his small cousin disturbed her. Probably he would expect the girl he married to share that devotion, and she wondered if she were capable of doing such a thing. She was sorry for the boy, sorry for anybody or anything that was crippled or disabled in any way. But her feeling was rather impersonal. It didn't go down very deep—was just a surface emotion.

And if she married a man like David, she would want all his attention—or at least the greater part of it. Having him give too much attention to a child would annoy her.

She was still thinking along this disturbing vein when Polly joined her.

"Why not come out tomorrow for a swim?" Polly asked. "I'm coming out."

"Perhaps I shall," said Margo. She noted the frock of the old rose linen Polly was wearing and the simple way she did her hair, combing it straight back from her forehead, and tying over it a bright band. "I love swimming."

Polly stood looking over the grounds.

"Have you seen the flower beds?" she said. "Peter and I have been digging them out from under weeds and wild vines. Come on, I'll show them to you."

Margo got up. She let Polly show her about, listened while she explained about this plant and that one, and that one; but her mind wasn't on what was being said. She kept stealing glances at Polly, reluctantly admitting to herself that the girl had something.

It wasn't glamour—it wasn't great beauty—nothing like that at all. And yet there was something about Polly that interested her. She began to understand how a man could learn to love her, even a man like David.

Whatever it was, it bothered Margo. Hereafter she hadn't thought of Polly as a real rival, but had thought of her as just a rather undeveloped smalltown girl who couldn't possibly compete with a girl who had been everywhere and seen everything. But she didn't feel that way about Polly any more.

"Well, here we are!" David called from the Inn porch. He came down the steps toward them, Peter at his side. "All set to get back to town?"

"I am," said Polly. "Aunt Susan will be having fits if she doesn't get her supper. She usually has it all cooked for me, but she's feeling sort of poorly today. I told her to rest, and I'd play chess."

"One of you can ride with me in my car," said Margo. "No need crowding in yours, David."

"Thanks," said David. "I'll tell you, you two girls ride in your Margo. You ought to be getting acquainted."

Margo looked at Polly. Polly looked at Margo.

They both thought, "How little a man understands us." But neither spoke her thoughts.

"Suits me," said Margo. "Come on, Polly."

David said: "Don't let riding in that buggy spoil you for riding in mine."

"I won't," said Polly. "I love that funny little boat of yours."

David and Peter got into David's car. They followed Margo out of the grounds, and into the highway.

"She's a looker, all right," Peter remarked.

"Yep, she is," said David. "Meaning Margo, of course?"

"Sure. I don't have to tell you Polly's a looker."

"Nope, son, you don't."

About David

THE two cars sped on toward Ardendale. Just before they turned into Main Street, Margo spoke of David.

"I suppose you know," she said, "that David Wiley is an extraordinarily good-looking young man."

"I do," said Polly. "So far there's nothing wrong with my vision. I've known it for a long time. I even thought he was good-looking back in public school days, when you, probably like a lot of others, thought him too thin and rather dull."

"To tell you the truth," said Margo, "I didn't give him much thought in those days."

"No, I suppose not. But—now?"

"Oh, now is different. He's developed into an amazingly attractive young man."

"You like David, don't you?"

"Yes—immensely."

final plans were made for the "English Village" benefit.

The report of the treasurer, Hagar Elmquist, was a detailed account of the net proceeds from the benefit, proceeds and expenses of each booth, games and contributions. The total proceeds, as announced previously in these columns, amounted to $1,770.

Since November 9, it was shown, the following amounts have been received from other sources: Profits from the sale of Bundles for Britain emblems and other articles at knitting headquarters, $68.55; contributions to the wool fund, $81.18; contributions to the special fund created for the purpose of garments and other necessities in response to the telegram from Mrs. Wales Latham, national president, $61.11.

Disbursements to date are: Wool and hospital garment materials, $481.38; express, freight and other administrative expenses, $48.64. This makes a balance on hand, December 31, 1940, of $1,504.79. Mr. Elmquist reported that since the above date the special fund has risen to $91.71, thanks to a contribution of $17.60 from the American Legion Auxiliary, $5 received from Trinity Memorial church and $2 from the Sugar Grove group. The first installment of $90 from this fund has now been sent to national headquarters.

The chairman of the various divisions under the direction of Mrs. E. P. Wroth presented their very interesting reports. That of Mrs. Melvin Keller, chairman of the knitting division, has already been announced in the Times-Mirror. Mrs. H. P. Stone reported that the total number of cartons shipped by freight to date is 68. These cartons contained 2,507 garments for men, women and children; 23 blankets and other articles; one carton of medical supplies. Four additional cartons shipped by express contained surgical instruments, dry goods and sutures. Mrs. Otto Peterson, in charge of sewing, showed that one shipment of hospital garments has been made and that 25 members worked at the United Refining Company office on Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. Harold Blair reported that eleven members worked that same afternoon in the sewing room of the Singer Sewing Machine Company, a large group at the First Lutheran church on Tuesday evening and 15 on Thursday at Trinity Memorial church. Members were urged to join these groups or call for sewing to be done at home or at the sewing machine room on Tuesday afternoon.

Rev. E. P. Wroth spoke of word received concerning an imperative need for binoculars and stated that the committee will welcome any such donations.

COUNTY SCHOOL DIRECTORS GIVE APPROVAL TO DEFENSE TRAINING; VOCATIONAL HEAD TO SUPERVISE

The Warren county board of school directors in special session has approved a training program for national defense, soon to be launched under the direction of the county vocational supervisor, C. F. H. Wuesthoff.

The federal government has appropriated the sum of ten million dollars, to be distributed to cooperating states for vocational courses and related instruction for out-of-school rural youth.

The county board has appointed the following men to the advisory board: L. B. Jones, of Sheffield; Ray Thompson, of Russell; James E. Pelton, of Sugar Grove; Paul E. Getz, of Youngsville, and E. B. Cornish, of Tidoute.

Five general pre-employment courses will be offered in the various cooperating districts throughout Warren and Forest counties, definitely designed to meet needs for training personnel in the national defense program.

Eight weeks of intense instruction of from three to six hours daily will be devoted to each course. The courses are as follows:

Operation, maintenance and repair of tractors, trucks and engines; Metal working, welding, tempering, drilling and machinery; Woodworking plans, construction and repair.

Elementary electricity—care, maintenance and repair of electric equipment and installations.

Enrollment in the courses will be limited to young men out of school, between the ages of 17 and 25. There will not be charges or fees, however, but applicants must enroll with the local employment offices and be ready and willing to work if the opportunity is presented. Certificates will be issued by the Department of Public Instruction to those completing one or more units of practical instruction.

Those interested in mechanical training are asked to secure a questionnaire at the office of the county superintendent of schools, or the office of the vocational supervisor of work in the courthouse. Young men employed on a part-time basis can arrange to secure the training, as well as those who are unemployed, proving they are available for 15 hours a week instruction.

Of the 450 questionnaires sent out, a number have already been returned.

WEEKLY SERMONETTE

CORPORATE RESPONSIBILITIES
REV. E. P. WROTH
Trinity Memorial Episcopal Church,

TEXT: Ephesians 5:27. "That he might present a glorious church, not having spot or wrinkle."

There is a distinction between one who is regarded as a good man and one who is known as a good citizen. The latter term denotes an interest in civic affairs, a sense of responsibility to civic organizations, a willingness to be spent in the service of the community.

Private morality is one thing and public service is quite another thing, yet the two are apt to be confused in the mind of the average man. Are both Christian? It would be absurd to say that they are not. Of course, the man of individual piety who emphasizes personal salvation and private rectitude follows the tenets of Christianity. But the vital question is whether these qualities are sufficient to justify ignoring other factors which enter into the whole duty of the Christian. I am not advocating corporate loyalty without personal morality, but many people are advocating personal morality without corporate responsibilities.

It is certainly better that a man should be a good man than a bad man, but this personal rectitude does not take the place of corporate obligations. We should not ignore the fact that a Kingdom of Heaven must be a place where individually good people can live and work together in spite of their personal virtues. It is not enough to be good. It is quite necessary to be fraternal if we would establish a Kingdom.

For example, I was asked the other day if a man should be expected to attend his church if he had no respect for his minister. Now, unfortunately, we cannot guarantee that ministers shall always be wise, pious or sensible, and the local church flourishes or wanes too frequently on the popularity of the present incumbent. In other words, so many Christians live merely in space and ignore the responsibilities which belong to time. As if it were a valid excuse to say to military authorities that the reason you are not a good soldier is because you are a better man than your officer.

There are as much responsible for the church in your community twenty years from now as is the minister, that is, within the sphere of your influence. It is difficult for the Church to become a witness for Christ to the world if individuals are content to leave the corporate witness to the poorer half. If they are virtuous then the Lord is entitled that they glorify Him and not themselves; and if they are not virtuous then they have no business to take their fellow servant by the throat and demand that he be thrown into prison.

After nearly twenty-five years in the ministry I want to testify that the greatest bar to the Church's usefulness has not been in the failure of Christians to lead responsible lives, but in their inability to serve alongside persons just as respectable as they themselves. I have observed too many churches reduced to spiritual poverty because the individual players were incapable of team work.

Christ did not come to save a lot of unrelated souls. He came to present to the Father a glorious Church without spot or wrinkle. I take it that he will take care of the spot in your minister's character or ability if you will control the wrinkle in your own face. But if you insist on magnifying the other man's spots, you will end by increasing your own wrinkles. And I am not told that the wrinkle is any more acceptable than the spot. We need that salutary discipline which enables little individuals to be parts of a glorious whole.

The Selective Service contingent leaving Warren next Friday will be given a sendoff befitting the occasion as the result of action taken by the Citizens' Celebration Committee at a meeting held Friday afternoon, and it will be good news for many in the community to learn that the committee has assumed the responsibility of arranging all future farewell celebrations, including that of Company J. The cooperation of the entire community will be welcomed by the committee in this endeavor.

Lovers of old-time ballads should be thankful for the music war that has brought them back into popularity again.

YOUR NATION'S CAPITOL

By Bruce Catton

The Times-Mirror Washington Correspondent

Washington, Jan. 18.—Some day soon it is going to occur to Congress or the administration that the railway labor act offers a fine blueprint for keeping strikes from interrupting the defense program.

Under this act, as amended in 1934, the National Mediation Board has been quietly but effectively helping railroad management and railroad labor compose all of their differences around the conference table. Since 1934 there have been but two railroad strikes—neither on a major trunk line—and two minor work stoppages involving comparatively few people. More than 4000 labor agreements have been filed with the board and upward of 360 disputes have been mediated.

In this one field, at least, there has been evolved a system for keeping the industrial peace which is fair to both sides, does not rest upon coercion or restriction and enables the industry to keep on working while its labor problems are being ironed out.

The whole set-up is fairly simple. The railroad labor act directs the board to dispose of labor disputes by acting on these four principles: Avoiding any interruption to commerce; forbidding any limitation on the workers' right to join or form a labor union; providing for complete independence of both workers and carriers in the matter of self-organization to carry out the purpose of the act; and providing for prompt settlement of all disputes.

The board may intervene where there is disagreement over the union which is to represent the employees. Usual course is to hold an election and let the majority decide. When a union and a railroad are negotiating a contract and can't agree, the board may intervene and offer its services as a mediator. In most cases, this eventually brings about an agreement. If mediation fails the board may then offer its services as arbitrator.

Neither side is compelled to accept arbitration, and if arbitration is turned down the board steps out of the case and the workers are free to strike—or look out for another 30-day period.

If a strike is voted, and the board feels it would substantially interrupt interstate commerce, the board may then notify the President to that effect. The President can then appoint an emergency board to study the whole affair and make a report.

Here again, there is no coercion—except for the proviso that there can be no strike or lockout for another 30-day period. The emergency board can't force anything on anyone. Its sole power is to make a report on the facts. But the theory is that such a report, setting forth the facts and indicating which side was more to blame for the trouble, given full publicity by the White House, would sway public opinion so effectively that there would be a peaceful settlement. So far, it has worked that way.

That, in brief, is the way labor peace is kept in the transportation industry. The employees keep their right to strike; the employers keep the corresponding right.

STAMP NEWS

EXACTLY a year ago the Cuban government announced plans for the issuance of airmail stamps commemorating the death of Jose Maria Heredia y Campuzano, poet and patriot. At last these stamps are now available. There are two values, one of which shows Niagara Falls. The patriot, who once lived in the United States, appears on both values.

Apparently prepared while France was still a republic is a new French value honoring Georges Guynemer, World War ace. This is a 50-franc blue and pictures the ace in flying togs.

The war goes on in England but stamp collectors are keeping right up with their American issues. At least, one Cleveland, Ohio, collector has received a letter from a London friend who asks for more new U. S. issues, pointing out that they are a splendid diversion in the long winter nights while huddled in air raid shelters.

A Washington Daybook

By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—This is the story of what is probably the greatest cleaning and pressing establishment in the world. It can handle 40,000 pieces a day—pieces of paper, not coats, pants nor dresses.

The phenomenal thing about it is that Milady never donned a gown more valuable nor a frock more fragile than some of the scraps of paper which National Archives cleans, presses and puts into files every day. Here are the priceless documents of American history, from the Versailles treaty right on back to the Revolutionary war alliance with France, the hand-inscribed minutes of the Continental Congress, and the Treaty with England which recognized the independence of the United States.

National Archives is less than 10 years old, but already its officials kick like steers when someone tries to pour an avalanche of records into their files (as for example when the war Department recently hinted that it might send over the records of the 1917-18 drafts). Although the building covers a generous city block, it soon will be crisscrossed by rafters with invaluable papers which have made American history.

Use Big Figures

THE Archivists measure filing in hundreds of thousands of cubic feet and bother with nothing in between. Thus, in 1930, when the most accurate survey was made, they figured that without records of the legislative (which would go to the Library of Congress) and judicial branches of government, 3,700,000 cubic feet of filing space was needed and that the records were increasing at the rate of 200,000 cubic feet a year. They reckoned without the New Deal. Since advent of the present administration, from the copy-right on the Blue Eagle (remember?) to the wax recording of president Roosevelt's latest "fireside chat," there undoubtedly have been piled up more records than in the whole history of government before the World War. If you have any doubts about that, check it with Archivist R. D. W. Connor or that veteran of legislative tables, his assistant administrative secretary, James D. Preston.

To get back to the cleaning and pressing: Some time ago, it was discovered that the old system of legal and public record filing (folding sheets bound with a red ribbon and placed upright in oblong cardboard boxes) infringed on space limitations more than Scarlett O'Hara's hoop skirts would crowd a modern kitchen-apartment.

Inspired By A Flood

SO CONNOR and his boys figured that all records must be filed flat in fireproof steel drawers. That reduced cubic feet to cubic inches, but still there was the problem of straightening out all the folded records. On that score, the bow must go to a young fellow named Arthur E. Kimberly, whose title at Archives is chief of repair and preservation. Kimberly knew that in order to flatten the creases in old paper (or new, for that matter) it is necessary to dampen it. He also knew that modern inks and papers wouldn't take a wetting. He was pondering this problem when he was called out to an Ohio river valley town to save some bank records that had been in a flood. On the way to the bank he passed a laundry—and from there on it was no trick at all.

Pressed Four Times

NOW, in the basement of Archives is a machine that carries old records down 30 feet of 95-humidity atmosphere and then presses them four times between mangles. It's far more delicate and finely adjusted than laundry machines, but the idea is the same.

The machine can turn out about 40,000 pieces of letter-size paper a day.

If you are wondering why the necessity for all this quantity production, start your computations this way: Recently added to Archives records were papers of claims, not including the Revolution or the World War, which numbered well over 115,000,000 sheets of paper.

seek broad emergency powers if necessary to fight the depression. Virtually the entire inaugural parade will be a sober reminder of the pre-eminent place of defense in the government's activities. There will be only three civilian units—200 greenland CCC boys, as many marchers from the National Youth Administration, wearing red, white and blue mackinaws, and a WPA delegation in working clothes. All the rest will be military in attire—khaki-garbed infantrymen, the steel of their bayonets flashing down their long ranks; row after row of bluejackets; brightly-uniformed marines, swinging along to the cadence of their famed marching song.

Symbolizing the growing strength of the armed forces will be battalions of cadets and midshipmen from West Point and Annapolis, soon to become regular officers. General George C. Marshall, army chief of staff will ride at the head of the parade as grand marshal.

While 280 military planes roar overhead in complex formations, batteries of big guns, medium and light tanks, scout cars, and motorcycles—samples of American military might—will roll along the pavement.

Washington, Jan. 18.—(T)—President Roosevelt's inaugural address on the east steps of the capitol Monday will be comparatively brief. The White House announced today.

Stephen Early, presidential secretary, said the president's address could run not more than twelve minutes or exceed 1,000 words—approximately the length of his first inaugural address on March 4, 1933. The second, on January 20, 1937, was nearly twice that long.

Early said the brevity of Monday's speech, to follow immediately upon the administering of the oath to the chief executive and Vice President Eliot Henry A. Walker was caused by the fact that Mr. Roosevelt already had expressed his latest views rather fully in his fireside radio chat of December 29 and in his opening message to congress January 6.

It was announced that the President and Mrs. Roosevelt would have 26 house guests for the inauguration, including most of the Roosevelt family.

The U. S. Army and Navy would like to have American auto manufacturers build 8000 ten-engined bombers and 4000 four-engined bombing planes.

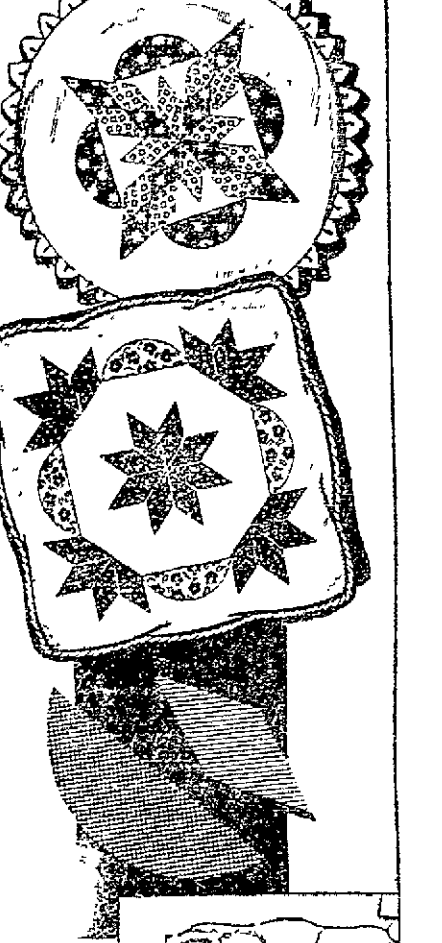

By means of a new system of nationing and training, the army will have 12,000 new pilots in 1941, instead of the 7000 announced.

FRISCO OPEN IN QUARTER FINAL;
BIG GUNS QUIET

San Francisco, Jan. 18.—(P)—Quarter-finalists wheeled up their big guns in the $5,000 San Francisco match play open golf tournament today, but the heavy thunder in the 1941 renewal of the annual event was a matter of memory. The "Big Berthas" of the competition, with few exceptions, were silenced in yesterday's first and second rounds. Newcomers or less successful players shotmakers dominated the third round.

On the national tournament circuit, the name of Fred Wood, of Vancouver, B.C. is not exactly by-word but Wood by production is more consistent golf than his name, reached that of Eduardo Blas, of the Argentine 6 and 5 and over 100. Chezz, Deal, N. J. 2 up, respectively.

He next meets Jimmy Thomson generally rated as the country's hardest ball valloper. Thomson, from Chicopee, Mass., charged through his first two rounds with wins over Einar Zimmelman, Fred Plani, G. 4 and 3 and S. Sneed, the Hot Springs, W. V. star, 1 up. Sneed before losing to Thomson, carded the finest round yesterday, a six under par 66 on the Presidio course in defeat. Ben Hogan, of White Plains, N. Y., himself shooting a 68.

The other quarter final matchplay in the upper bracket paired off Marvin "Chick" Harbert, 25-year-old pro making his first winter swing and veteran Harry Cooper of Chicago.

Tex and followed with an up-victory over the defending tour-ment champion, Jim Demaret.

Houston, Tex., 1 up on the 18th hole.
Copper bounced Ray Mangrum, Oakmont, Pa., out of competition 3 and 2 and handed an identical beating to Joe Brown, Des Moines, Ia., in the second round.

Axis Shipping Bombed By RAF on Dutch Coast

(From Page One)
The number of casualties in Swansea, a town of 165,000 population located near the mouth of the Bristol Channel, was officially described as "not large," but some fatalities were reported at an unidentified place in Devon in southwest England.

(Swansea has been described as "the metallurgical capital of Wales" and before the war was the chief seat of the copper, tin-plate and patent fuel industries.)
London had a brief alert after midnight, but apparently few bombs were dropped in the capital area.

In the early part of the night raiders concentrated on a town in the west of England, but were reported driven off by a furious anti-aircraft barrage which was said to have rocked houses.

Men 36 years of age were registered by Great Britain today for military duty, bringing to about 3,000,000 the total called to arms. Approximately 2,600,000 had been registered previously.

Governor James Outlines Accomplishments Of Administration

made by Richard P. Brown, secretary of commerce, on attracting new industry to Pennsylvania, capitol sources said.

James keynoted his speech on improved business conditions which he pledged in his 1938 campaign, saying:
"The employment figures are the best index of the extent to which that promise has been kept."

The governor said unemployment was reduced by one-third in 1939 and "today it is about half of what it was when the administration began."

James listed as accomplishments, bearing out his pledges:
1. "Divorcing politics from relief."
2. "Helping" the anthracite industry by bringing about, with the help of operators and union men, a voluntary tonnage allocation plan.
3. "Dealing straight from the shoulder with the liquor question" by "uprooting the rackets which we inherited."
4. "Fewer strikes" and better labor conditions as a result of his labor policy.

Greeks Report 1,000 Italians Taken Captive arrived 7th Division—Lupi Di Toscana—commanded by Colonel Meneghetti. Many officers were among the prisoners, a communique said.

The part of Valona, Albania, one of the next immediate goals of the Greek advance, was bombed heavily yesterday, the Greek spokesman said.

(Reports reaching the Yugoslav-Albanian border said bitter fighting was taking place along the central front in the 10-mile sector between Kila and Italian-held Tepeleni. Both Greeks and Italians were reported concentrating troops in that area and some military experts believe a decisive battle was developing.)

Approves Defense Program

1942, but that delays in production of the "heavy items" were slowing it down.

Mrs. Rogers wanted to know whether an effort should not be made to have Britain put up collateral for war supplies in the form of tin, rubber or aluminum "in order to protect the finances of the United States."

"Well, it's nice to have collateral," Knudsen replied, "but aren't we a little beyond that point now?"

The big, gray-haired production chief emphatically declared he did not believe the lease-lend bill would commit the United States to "polishing the world," as suggested by Mrs. Rogers.

"I think defense of this country is the primary reason for this bill," Knudsen said, "whether you do it directly or indirectly."

"But in doing so, you are polishing the world," persisted Mrs. Rogers.

"You are simply taking care of your self," Knudsen replied.

The question of a diversion of authority between Knudsen and Sidney Hillman, associate director general of the OPM, cropped up again when Representative Knudsen (R-Ohio) asked whether Knudsen felt any legal limitations on his authority to the program.

No, sir," Knudsen replied. "There are two heads to your organization, aren't there?" Vorys asked.

"Yes," replied Knudsen. "Did you ever work in an organization with two heads to it before?"

Well," Knudsen replied amid laughter, "there were where I worked."

When Representative Fish (R-N.Y.) took up the questioning he inquired whether Knudsen was the head of the defense production program.

Knudsen replied crisply, "Yes, sir."

"Then you're the head and not Mr. Hillman," Fish asked.

Well, he's my co-director," Knudsen shot back.

Fish said he wanted to know who was boss.

Knudsen replied that the four directors made the policies and "they are carried out by Mr. Hillman and myself," the other two directors, in addition to Knudsen and Hillman, are Secretaries Stimson and Knox.

After hearing William S. Knudsen, defense production chief, the committee recessed today until Tuesday.

Congressional interest in the swiftly-moving controversy over the lease-lend proposal was heightened, meanwhile, by these other developments:

Joseph P. Kennedy, retiring ambassador to Great Britain, was reported today to favor the principle of the proposal but to want some restrictions on method as set out in the pending bill. Kennedy will discuss his views in a radio address tonight (7 o'clock, EST.) over a National Broadcasting Company network. A statement from him had been much sought by opponents of the bill.

Senator Wheeler (D-Mont.), a leader of the opposition, said "several reliable sources" had informed him that Prime Minister Winston Churchill of Great Britain had been "insisting on a declaration of war" by the United States. The British, he said, wanted airplane pilots and sailors from this country.

Wheeler made his statement after Churchill in an unheralded address in Glasgow, Scotland, had said that Britain would "not reverse" in 1941 large armies from overseas" but would require more American ships, airplanes and weapons than she would be able to pay for.

Harry L. Hopkins, President Roosevelt's personal representative in Britain, was present on the platform as Churchill spoke. Wheeler declared he had information that Hopkins' mission in England was to determine "what immediate steps can be taken short of a war declaration."

New Nazi Bases in Rumania

(From Page One)
Berlin, Jan. 18.—(P)—Germany is using a new long-range, four-motored bomber in aerial attacks against British merchant shipping, informed sources said today.

Equipped with an undisclosed number of machine guns and cannons and carrying a crew of six, the bomber recently has sunk "numerous British ships far out in the Atlantic," these sources said.

(Plane raids on convoys said in the Atlantic ocean far off the coast have been announced by the British.)

De-loading equipment, it was reported, will enable the craft to carry out attacks in all weather conditions. Details of the ship, called the Focke-Wulf Courier, were withheld, but it was said it had been developed from the FW 200 Condor, a commercial plane which made flights to New York and Tokyo before the war.

Coinciding with the disclosure of the new plane, DNE (official German news agency) said the 31,000-ton British battleship Malaya had reached Gibraltar with evident signs of damage inflicted during a raid by Axis planes on a British convoy Jan. 10.

Efforts had been made to hide the damage with wooden structures and replating, the news agency reported.

There was some conjecture the new planes had taken part in that raid in which the 23,000-ton aircraft carrier Illustrious also was damaged and the cruiser Southampton lost.

Docks, wharves and storehouses at the south Wales port of Swansea were set afire by German bombers in last night's raids on England, informed sources declared today.

More English ports were reportedly damaged.

Otherwise, it was said, the Luftwaffe's operations over England during the night were limited to "armed reconnaissance."

No British aerial activity was reported over Germany.

The general staff of the German air force declared today that only one German plane was lost in the night raid on Malta in which new damage was said to have been done to the British aircraft carrier Illustrious. (The British said ten Axis planes were shot down during the raid.)

A German submarine was credited by the high command with sinking 28,000 tons of merchant shipping. The ships sunk were not identified.

Needs of British Outlined

far more than we shall be able to pay for."

Churchill asserted Adolf Hitler was building Britain up to prepare to beat off invasion now that was the case last summer or fall. He said flatly, however, that the war in 1941 would be no less terrible than in 1940, and added:

"Before us lie many months of having to endure bombardment of our cities and industrial areas without the power to make equal reply."

Churchill told the councilors: "That had man (Hitler) has never had so great a need as he has now to strike Britain from his path. He is master of a great part of Europe. His armies can move almost wherever they will upon the continent. He holds down eight or ten countries by force, by secret police, and by still more odious local quislings."

He said this occupation of countries to which "presently perhaps Italy" may be added, was building a "hatred for the Nazi creed and for the German name which generations and perhaps centuries will hardly efface."

Britain's improved position Mr. Churchill attributed in part to the success "far beyond our dreams" of the campaign in North Africa, in which he said "nearly 50,000 prisoners have been taken" and "eight or nine divisions of Italian troops, well equipped, have been dashed out of existence with inconceivably small losses."

Berlin, Jan. 18.—(P)—Authorized Germans took the viewpoint today that Prime Minister Churchill's speech at Glasgow last night was directed at only one person—Harry Hopkins, special representative of President Roosevelt.

In that opinion, the Glasgow audience was only window dressing.

These sources said they thought Churchill had made some point in now being only "moderately optimistic" and not as cocky as formerly.

MOST STOCKS ARE NEGLECTED IN BRIEF SATURDAY MARKET SESSION

New York, Jan. 18.—(P)—A few steels, rails and aircrafts achieved mild popularity in today's brief stock market but many issues continued to suffer from neglect.

Some buying came in on the idea that the list after six successive sessions in which no progress had been made on average, was entitled to a moderate come-back.

While selling was light throughout the two-hour proceedings, bidding was equally unimpressive. The turnover of around 250,000 shares was one of the smallest in about two months.

Stocks up fractions to a point or so at one time or another included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Youngstown Sheet, Santa Fe, Great Northern, Southern Pacific, Union Pacific, Westinghouse, General Electric, Johns-Manville, U. S. Gypsum, Bendix, Lockheed, Consolidated Aircraft, International Nickel, Consolidated Edison, Chrysler, General Motors, Mack Truck, Sears Roebuck, International Harvester and Goodyear.

"All members of the Pennsylvania Newspaper Publishers' Association have been urged to scrutinize the daily news carefully to make absolutely sure that no secret information is printed that will give aid to the enemies of the democratic process."

"The free press of America is the first line of defense in the maintenance of a democracy. Our weapons are ready for the United States government and the commonwealth of Pennsylvania to use."

The letter was signed by Person. The closing session of the convention will be climaxed by a banquet tonight, with Dr. Allan Roy Daffoe, physician for the Dionne quintuplets, as the main speaker.

tions designed to make farming more profitable and farm life more comfortable.

In all, officials said, more than 10,000 exhibitors will display their products.

In conjunction with the show, between 6,000 and 7,000 vocational students will hold exhibits, demonstrations and meetings with the climax coming Tuesday at the annual future farmers banquet when 75 boys will be awarded the degree of "Keystone Farmers."

At the same time more than 60 vocational agriculture school boys will be awarded medals as place winners in the annual vocational agriculture state project contests.

and Iron Company. It is effective February 1.

The company, in its suit entered last July, contended the district's budget appropriation was excessive and demanded that the district's tax levy be reduced from a proposed 33 to 24 mills.
